EDITORIAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR ADVERTISERS

NEW PLACES, NEW PROGRAMS

This is a regular column in our printed magazines that highlights new programs and similar news in the communities we cover. Each issue we include coverage of 3 or 4 specific programs. To qualify for coverage, you MUST:

- Be a new business (launched within the last 3 months); OR
- Have a new location for an already-established business; OR
- Have a new program (newly-offered birthday parties, for example) OR
- Have a new technology (a cutting edge xray machine at a dentist's office, for instance) OR
- Have something else noteworthy and NEW to promote

To be considered for inclusion in this column, speak to your sales representative.

CALENDAR LISTINGS

Every month our print calendar boasts hundreds of listings of family-friendly activities in each of the areas we cover, and our fully searchable online calendar is updated daily. We strive to include all types of events, from cultural programming at museums to breastfeeding support groups for moms, from festivals and exhibits for the kids to concerts and readings for the entire family. Many of our listings are free, and all are affordable and creative ways to spend some time.

Age-coded and with all the pertinent details, our calendar is the go-to place for parents to find out what to do with their kids every day of the month.

To submit an event to be listed in our calendar (it's free!), simply go to:

www.nymetroparents.com.submitevent

BECOME A PREFERRED SOURCE

Our editors access a database of local experts as sources for original articles every month—and, provided they are experts in the field relevant to the topic being explored in an article, advertisers will be approached for interviews on a priority basis. That means your experts will be quoted with full attributions (to include organization or business name, city or neighborhood location, and expert's title and credentials*).

By weaving your advice into a feature or department story, readers get the benefit of a fully-reported and fact-checked piece, and are ensured of our publications' editorial integrity and credible authority—and you get added editorial exposure.

To be entered into our database of preferred experts, speak to your sales representative, who will ask you for specific information to include; the more specific you are with areas of expertise, the more likely our editors are to reach out with interview opportunities.

ARTICLE IDEA SUBMISSION

Suggest ideas for articles based on your experience in your field and your exposure to the community we serve! Note that we get many requests for coverage, so not every request will ultimately be covered in our magazines. However, if we do like your idea, we will be in touch to interview you for your thoughts and possibly quote you as an expert source in the resulting article. We rely on feedback from people like you to make sure our editorial coverage is as targeted and as useful as possible to our parent readers.

Go to: www.nymetroparents.com.storyideas to share your ideas with us.

*We do NOT list full addresses, phone numbers, or websites within the context of our editorial articles when a source is being quoted, per standard journalistic principles. While we are willing to approach our advertisers for interviews first, our editors have discretion and maintain editorial integrity during the preparation of all articles.

 All facts are to be checked either over the phone or via email by the reporter preparing the piece. However, it is not our practice to send articles to subjects for review or approval before publication.

What do "Premium Placement ads look like? How do they work?"

Simply put, Premium Placement ads are ad tiles that link to your microsite. A microsite is a single-page web site that features your copy, images, videos, website addresses, e-mail addresses, and a form that interested parties can fill out to receive more information directly from you.

Premium Placement ad tiles rotate across the home page, category pages (i.e. "Birthday") and sub-category pages (i.e. "Birthday Locations & Places") in a clients category of business. Clients may choose to tag their ads in multiple categories.
